They point with pleasure to the splendid record of the Third Ward in the recent election and claim that John Keen's large majority was chiefly due to the "hustling" abilities displayed by Mr. Powers.

Two well-known young men, about town had an altercation at midnight last Sunday evening on Broad Street, near the American House, concerning a young lady whom both of the young men wished to escort to her home, to which the other objected. A scuffle then took place. The tall young man took hold of the short young man and threw him into the tub of water at the American House. This had the effect of dampening the ardor of the short young man and the tall young man walked off with the prize.

The leaders of the Democratic party in this town, it is said, with a view to putting at rest all talk about the Postmaster'ship, have decided to give Francis Law the refusal of the place. It is conceded that some compensation is due to Mr. Law at the hands of the Democrats. He has stood as the party's candidate for various offices at times when the struggle was a hopeless one. The term of the present Republican incumbent, Thomas E. Hayes, does not expire until December, 1893, but it is not likely that the Democrats will wait in patience until that time before making a change. School Journal, October 1st, 1892.

(Extract from the School Journal, October 1, 1892.)

"It is a mistake to suppose that private schools are not efficient; the teachers are, in most cases, college graduates; the teachers' agencies assert that no one is so exacting as the private school principal in search of a teacher."

"In the private school, classification plays a small part and teaching a large part; a pupil is taken to be advanced irrespective of his class. The constant attempt is to create interest, and to put on the pupil himself, as much as possible, the responsibility of his own development. Freedom of thought, and, as much as possible, of action is encouraged."

Visit the MONTCLAIR MILITARY ACADEMY and judge for yourself the truth of this statement.

The regular meeting of the Watessing Field Club was held on Monday night. The club started the present year with great expectations of making a record.

At the annual election in January last Edward Hart engineered an opposition ticket, which was elected. The new administration started out to give an object lesson in how to make a social club a success.

As far as practical work is concerned the new administration has been a flat failure. The deposing of Frederick R. Plich from the Presidency was a serious mistake, now fully realized by all, and by none more keenly than Mr. Hart, who has been frank enough to admit that a mistake was made. Election time is again approaching. It is an easy thing for a clique to steal a march on the members of the club and run in a snap ticket, but before any such movement is concocted the serious question of whether it pays or not should be considered.

New Fall Styles.

The very latest fad in gentlemen's wearing apparel, the Bedford cord chevrons. These goods are made in straight and diagonal weaves, with long and short naps. Usually these new goods cannot be found except in the most fashionable Broadway merchant tailor stores, but Mr. Charles H. Davis, the leading clothier of Newark and merchant tailor, has secured a large assortment of these goods by closing out the entire production of a leading mill for this season, and has cut them in the very latest styles, such as the new three-button double-breasted sacks, box back, full length, elegantly lined and made by our exclusive tailors, by that means removing the ready-made appearance that is always objected to by wearers of fine ready-made clothing.

The establishment of Mr. Charles H. Davis is located at 797 Broad Street, Newark, and is the only place where these goods can be found.—Advt.
